

Chris MacDonald is a Toronto-based ethics consultant, speaker, and educator. His goal is to help organizations tame complex ethical issues. As an ethics consultant, he can help with:

- Ethics education and training;
  - Ethical leadership;
  - Conflict of interest training and policy development;
  - Developing your own Code of Ethics or Code of Conduct;
  - The values and ethics dimensions of corporate governance;
  - Assessing the “ethical climate” of your workplace.
-

A university professor for the last decade, Chris is Director of the Jim Pattison Ethical Leadership Program at the Ted Rogers School of Management. In addition, he has held visiting appointments at Duke University, Université de Montréal, and the Keck Graduate Institute in Claremont, California. Chris has a Ph.D. in Philosophy from the University of British Columbia, and has published widely on business ethics, corporate responsibility, conflict of interest, healthcare ethics, professional ethics, and more. He has provided educational and consulting services to corporate boards, professional associations, hospitals, startup companies, major charitable foundations, as well as to the Canadian military.

Contact Information:

Email chris@chrismacdonald.ca

Web <http://chrismacdonald.ca>

Blog <http://businessethicsblog.com>

Tel 416-979-5000x6903